A forex strategy specialised in trading 3 majors; EURUSD, GBPUSD and AUDUSD. An automated algo which can be switched on and off depending on global macroeconomic risk and market conditions. The algo identifies high probability market patterns then compares these to historical patterns and data recorded back 15 years. This gives the strategy its edge as trades are based on current high probability patterns but then further confirmed with highly correlated historical patterns which have worked. The algo identifies high probability reversal and trend continuation patterns. It will identify high probability reversal patterns by analysing overbought and oversold conditions, once identified it will look back on historical data and seasonal tendencies to see if there is a high correlation between the current event and past events, if it deems it high probability the trade will be placed. High probability trends are identified by first identifying a trend, if the market does 3 higher high or lower low swings it will be considered a trend, then historical events will be considered and if deemed high probability the trade will be placed. Trade lengths are intraweek, sometimes intraday depending on the volatility in the market.
